rule. When the prisoner arrived at jail, he was affired in a suit of blue and wore a drab hat, pulled down over his eyes, giving him the appearance of an ugly character. It may be worthy of note to state that some too or three weeks ago Guitteau went to jail for the purpose of visiting it, but was refused admittance on the ground that it was not visit. not live more than two hours, Mrs. Garfield arrived an hour ago. on the ground that it was not visitors' day. He at that time mentioned his name as Guitteau, and said that he came from Chicago. When brought to jail, to-day, he was ad-mitted by the officer who had previously refused to allow him to enter, tras. In the early part of the mornand mutual recognition took place, ing business was temporarily sus and mutual recognition took place, Guitteau saying, "you are the man who wouldn't let me go through the jail some time ago." The only other remark he made before being placed in his cell was that General Sherman would arrive at the jail soon. The two jailors who are now guarding his cell, state that they have seen him around the jail several times, and that on one occasion he appeared to be under the influence of liquor. to be under the influence of liquor, on one of his visits subsequently to the first one mentioned, calling at the librarian's room and telling how he had been treated by Blaine. These officers state that Guitteau succeeded in reaching the rotunda of the building where he was noticed examining the scaffold from which the Hirth murderers were hanged. Pursuant to orders from the attorney-general the officer in charge of the jail declined to give any further information, nor would he state in what cell the prisoner was confined. This officer was an attendant at the old city jail at the time of the assassination of President Lincoln.

The papers referred to in Guit-teau's letter to Sherman have not yet been given out for ublication. Bybeen given out for ublication. Byron Andrews, who is the Washington correspondent of the Chicago

THE NEWS ELSEWHERE

AT BOSTON. The news of the attempted assau-sination of the President caused most intense excitement in this city and crowds surround newspane offices, all of which have issued expended on every hand. The later favorable news that the President was not dead in a measure quelled the excitement. AT NEW YORK.

Washington news, declining 1@14.

The news of the shooting of President Garfield reached the police headquarters simultaneously with the report that the President was dead. Amid the utmost excitement the story fled from mouth to mouth and was listened to at first with incredulity, but, as fresh confirmation. credulity, but as fresh confirmation of the rumor arrived, indignation took its place. Mr. Nichols, the only commissioner in the building left hastily for down town in search of fuller information of the reported assassination. A total suspension of business in the department office followed. Clerks and employees gathered in knots in the halls to discuss the situation and keep a look out for fresh news. When at length message came announcing that President Garfield was not mortally wounded, a shout of "God be thanked!" went up.

The news down town was no ceived with consternation caused much excitement. On Wa street brokers and bankers almost forgot evorything in their eagernes to get further particulars. They besieged Kernan's news agency, on Broad street, where dispatches from Washington were constantly arriving, and being distributed. Groups were seen in the streets discussing the subject anxiously and news boys did a heavy business in extras. At the opening of the stock exchange the news depressed the market, but further dispatches announcing that the wounded President was in a fair way to recover, and was not so dancaused a reaction.

ARTHUR AND CONKLING

Vice-President Arthur and Conkling arrived from Albany by boat this morning. The boat was late, not arriving until about 10 o'clock. As soon as she touched the wharf a telegram was handed to Arthur Upon reading it he dropped back in his chair, greatly shocked. It is presumed the telegram announced the shooting of Prest. Garfield.

A reporter called at the Fifth Av-enue hotel this morning about an The letter was handed to me this hour after the reception of the disminute by Major Wm. J. Twiring, patch, and sent his card to the rooms of Vice-President Arthur and ex-Senator Conkling. Word was immediately returned that the subject of the President's assassination was too serious a subject to be talked and hereby return it to the keeping of in a moment, and neither would be seen under any circumstances. The reporter saw Conkling in the hallway, near his room, a few minutes after, and when asked his opinion of the shooting, begged to be excused. "The news has found me so unprepared and overwhelmed with personal cares that it has almost stunned me. May God grant it may not be true. It is the most terrible incident in our history since the death of Lincoln. If it's true, may heaven help our country. Conkling turned away and went to

MURAT HALSTEAD,

Who is at present stopping at the Brevoort House, said, this morning when the news was given him, that he was horror-stricken. He looked at the reporter for a moment, and cried out that-it could not be true. On receiving assurance that the report had been substantiated by an official dispatch, Halstead turned pale and said, with tears in his eyes, that he must have time to think of it. "My God! how can such things occur in a free country? We have no nihilists here seeking to overturn government. We have had peace for many years, and are in the midst of it. I cannot understand it. can only pray heaven that it is not true."

The sub-treasury and custom house are greatly concerned. Messages are constantly flying, giving intelligence. Collector Merritt is much agitated, and remarked when asked as to the political significance of the event: "When the President dies Arthur is president." mayor had flags at half mast early but took them down when he learned the President was not dead.

THURLOW WEED,

Of the Albany Evening Journal, says Guitteau, the man who shot President Garfield, called upon him last October and asked for a chance to speak on the stump for the republetin has been issued: The President's condition is somewhat less favorable, evidences of internal hemorrhage being distinctly recognized. Pulse, 130; temperature, 96°, which is a little below the normal. He suffers more pain, but his mind the su mittee, that he believed Guitteau to be a fraud. Johnson made a mem-orandum and said he would look into the case. Barnes was chairman of the county committee. Guitteau present at the shooting, is quoted as said he came from Chicago.
